Press Release

Alpha Bank included in the Bloomberg Gender-Equality Index (GEI) for the second consecutive year

Alpha Bank’s consistent commitment to the reinforcement of gender equality and advancement of women in the workplace was recognized for the second consecutive year, by its inclusion in the Bloomberg Gender-Equality Index (GEI), one of the most important indices for businesses around the world.

Alpha Bank, which has been assessed for its inclusion in the GEI Index, based on statistic data assessment, was distinguished for creating a work environment of equal opportunities, as well as for its policies, programs and human resources benefits that are exclusively available to women Employees.

The Bloomberg Gender-Equality Index (GEI) is one of the most comprehensive indices on gender equality issues globally, and it includes today 325 companies around the world, three of which are Greek, and assesses 6,000 listed companies from all sectors of the economy from 84 countries, in terms of transparency in gender reporting and the initiatives they take for advancing women in the workplace.

Furthermore, the GEI Index is a key source of information for the global investment community, at a time that a growing number of investors are incorporating environmental-social governance (ESG) data into their decisions.
